that highlights those aspects of Soviet emigration policy that are still a serious cause for concern, Congressman Hoyer is introducing identical legislation in the House.

My legislation sends a message to the Soviet Government that Soviet emigration policy will be judged according to the international commitments that government has pledged to honor. Between now and June of 1992, when a Jackson-Vanik waiver will again be addressed by Congress, the Soviets must demonstrate how sincere they are about implementing a truly free and just emigration policy.

The legislation I am introducing today expresses the sense of the Congress that the President should consider the following objectives before providing in 1992 a waiver of the Jackson-Vanik trade restrictions with respect to the Soviet Union.

First, all individuals who, for at least 5 years, have been refused permission to emigrate from the Soviet Union, are given permission to emigrate.

Second, restrictions on freedom of movement, including those pertaining to secrecy, are not being abused or applied in an arbitrary manner.

Third, a fair, impartial, and effective administrative or judicial appeals process exists for those who have been denied permission to emigrate.

Fourth, the Government of the Soviet Union is ensuring that its laws, regulations, practices, and policies conform with their obligations under international obligations and commitments, including the relevant provisions of the Helsinki Final Act and all Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) commitments.

Mr. President, I urge all of my colleagues to support this resolution.
