(a) That the mark whose use is charged as an infringement was registered and used prior to the publication under subsection (a) or (c) of section 12 of this Act of the registered mark of the registrant, and not abandoned: Provided, however, That this defense shall apply only where the said mark has been published pursuant to subsection (c) of section 12 and shall apply only for the area in which the mark was used prior to the date of publication of the registrant's mark under subsection (a) or (c) of section 12 of this Act.

SEC 42(a). The remedies provided in title VI of this Act shall be available against any person who imports into the United States, any article bearing, without the consent of the registrant, a mark registered under the Act of March 3, 1881, or the Act of February 20, 1905, or the Act of March 19, 1920, or on any register provided for by this Act, or bearing an infringement or such registered mark. Upon request, the Commissioner of Customs shall make available to any registrant the name and address of any importer of any article which is alleged in writing to bear any such registered mark or infringement thereof, and shall make available to any manufacturer or trader claiming the exclusive right to the use of a trade or commercial name in the United States, the name and address of any importer of any article which is alleged in writing to bear a trade of commercial name, or infringement thereof, in violation of the legal rights of said manufacturer or trader.

(b) After complaint of any registrant of a mark registered under the Act of March 3, 1881, or the Act of February 20, 1905, or on the principal register provided for by this Act, articles of foreign origin bearing such registrant's mark or alleged infringement thereof shall be detained in customs custody upon the filing of the certificate of registration and of bond by such registrant conditioned to hold the importer harmless from loss or damage resulting from such detention in the event the use of the mark appearing on the imported articles is not finally held to violate the rights of the registrant: Provided. That any article so denied may be released from customs custody upon written consent of the registrant or upon the filing by the importer of a bond conditioned to hold the registrant harmless from loss or damage by reason of such release prior to final adjudication, in the event the use of the mark appearing on such articles is finally held to violate the rights of the registrant: Provided further, That no article shall be detained in customs custody under this subsection for a longer period than three months unless suit against the importer or ultimate consignee has been filed by the registrant.

(c) Whenever the use, in connection with a specified imported article or class of articles, of a registered mark or infringement thereof or of a trade name or infringement thereof has been enjoined by final judicial decree or order, such articles bearing such marks or names, or such infringements thereof, imported by any person, shall be excluded, during the effectiveness of the decree or order, from entry as any customs port where a certified copy of such decree or order is on file, unless the written consent of the registrant or manufacturer or trader to the entry, is furnished. Certified copies of any such decree or order may be filed with the collector of customs at any port of entry in the United States.

No articles of United States origin shall be excluded from entry unless specifically directed in the judicial decree or order.

(d) No article shall be detained or excluded from entry under subsection (b) or (c) which is imported for the personal or household use of the ultimate consignee thereof as a gift or otherwise, and is not intended for sale.

(e) Any owner, importer, or consignee of articles detained under subsection (b) or refused entry under subsection (c) may have relief against the registrant, manufacturer, or trader by a proceeding in any United States district court in the district where the goods are held or where such registrant, manufacturer, or trader is an inhabitant or may be found, for a declaratory judgment to determine whether the use of the mark or name on the imported articles violates the rights of the registrant, manufacturer, or trader. The filing of a complaint under subsection

(b) or of an order or decree under subsection (c) shall be ineffective unless the registrant, manufacturer, or trader also files a power of attorney authorizing the collector of customs to accept process in any suit brought under this subsection.

(f) Any articles excluded from entry by virtue of subsection (c) shall, if not exported or destroyed within a reasonable time, be seized and disposed of by the customs authorities in the manner prescribed for the seizure and disposal of merchandise imported in violation of the customs laws, but no such articles shall be sold within the United States, except for exportation, unless the offending name or mark is removed therefrom.

(g) The consent to the entry of articles as provided for in subsections (b) or (c) shall not be considered to impair proceedings in the public interest by any agency of the Government.

(h) No imported article shall be detained or excluded from entry under subsection (b) or (c) if the complained of or offending mark or name is obliterated or removed.

(i) Any imported article subject to the provisions of this section may be exported at any time, but such exportation shall not abate or impair any judicial proceeding provided for herein.

(j) The Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to make such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the functions of the Customs Service under the provisions of this Act.

Page 41, line 10, strike out "perfected" and insert "granted".

Page 41, lines 11, 12, and 13, strike out "when such country makes the same requirement of nationals or residents of the United States."
